Occupiers' Charge

PRAGUE — The Soviet-sponsored propaganda newspaper Zpravy accused two British diplomats of working for British intelligence in Czechoslovakia and charged Western military attaches with spying on military units.

The newspaper accused former British Embassy press attache Cyril Jonsen and British counselor H. D. Michell of gathering confidential information from reformists intellectuals.

Zpravy listed 27 intellectuals, mostly from the press and radio, whom it said were the most frequent visitors to Jonsen's office. About 12 of them were Jewish. Among Jonsen's contacts were said to be Jiri Hochman, an editor with the journalists' magazine Reporter; Bohumil Toninger of Prague Television, and playwright Vaclav Havel.

Zpravy named writers' union president Eduard Goldstuecker and movie critic Antonn Liehm among Michell's contacts.

The newspaper also attacked "the tendentious activity of accredited correspondents, some of whom have already had to be expelled."
